Mysuru, Sept. 13 (AG&BCT)- The much-awaited Dasara Air Show by the Indian Air Force (IAF) has been officially scheduled for Saturday, Sept. 27, at 4.30 pm, at the Torchlight Parade Grounds, Bannimantap — five days after the grand inauguration of the Dasara festivities on Sept. 22.

Mysuru Deputy Commissioner and Dasara Special Officer G. Lakshmikanth Reddy confirmed the development to Star of Mysore, stating that the Mysuru District Administration has received formal communication from the IAF Headquarters, confirming the aerobatics display on the evening of Sept. 27.

Ahead of the main event, where the 'metal birds' will set the Mysuru skies ablaze with breathtaking manoeuvres, the IAF will conduct a full rehearsal, as in previous editions.

Before this, a specialist IAF team is expected to visit the venue next week to inspect ground conditions, temperature, crowd capacity, seating arrangements, and safety measures, ensuring a flawless show.

The date of the rehearsal, however, is not confirmed.

In addition, the team will carry out an aerial survey of the Torchlight Parade Grounds before finalising the event calendar. Arrangements will also be made at the take-off point, which, as in earlier years, is likely to be the Air Force Station, Yelahanka, Bengaluru.

Palace preps for Navarathri glow

Workers erecting scaffolds at Mysore Palace to change the electric bulbs and clean the ceilings ahead of Navarathri.

Mysuru, Sept. 13 (MTY&BCT)- With grand Mysuru Dasara festivities just around the corner, meticulous restoration work is underway to ensure that the Mysore Palace's illumination dazzles visitors in all its glory.

Nearly 16,000 to 17,000 damaged incandescent bulbs are being replaced so that the full set of one lakh decorative bulbs will shine brightly when the Navarathri celebrations begin.

Every year during Navarathri, royal family conducts religious ceremonies inside the Palace, making flawless illumination a matter of tradition and prestige.

While the bulb replacement process began at various Palace gates about 5-6 days ago, work on the main Palace building façade commenced yesterday, with large cranes being deployed to reach the towering structures.

BRUISE BREWS SCANDAL: Every time Kamala and I go for our Sunday walk, we will have a neighbour come over to comment on my health status. "Looking a little tired, anything serious?" — Lalitha Aunty is always ready to diagnose terminal cancer based on her extensive medical ignorance. Like those Uncles who never fail to ask a newly-married couple if there is any good news, she has a morbid obsession with bad news. This time her eyes fell on a random bruise on my hand: "It seems these bruises could be life-threatening, see what they are saying about Trump!" So world leaders face the same nosy speculations. A camouflaged bruise receives international attention from hacks hunting for clickbait. "Also it seems he had died but suddenly he is alive again!" I didn't inform Aunty that Kamala slapping imaginary mosquitoes on my wrist was far from a fatal injury, though they could be classified as some form of domestic abuse. I hurried past her before she began writing my obituary.

On our second round we met another garrulous uncle. Thimappa Thaatha hobbled up to add his medical report: "Slightly round-round you are becoming Pa…check your thyroid. Also go jogging daily instead of just walking, people your age should not put on weight." Thaatha sat down clumsily on the park bench, breathless with the exhaustion of giving me med advice. By now I was thoroughly confused. Was I reflecting the motapa that the PM spoke about from the ramparts of Red Fort or looking gaunt like Karan Johar after Ozempic?

No wonder it is claimed that Putin brought back poop boxes from his US visit — everyone is looking for evidence of illness in world leaders. Some time ago it was Xi who was the subject of speculation when he was not seen at the BRICS summit. Rumours swirling around his health forced Biden to step out of the presidential race. Nosy neighbours and curious journos always give wings to such rumours. As I reached down to tie my laces, Thimappa Thaatha looked closely at my ankles. He played his Trump card again: "Swollen ankles! Chronic venous insufficiency. They will have to amputate your foot soon." I jumped up to continue walking and end the uninvited health update. The collective medical expertise available on a morning walk in any Indian park is enough to trigger severe anxiety and leave me with a bruised ego.

Freediver holds breath for 29 minutes

Zagreb: Vitomir Maričić, an experienced freediver from Croatia, recently set a new world record for the longest oxygen-assisted breath-hold ever — 29 minutes and 3 seconds — surpassing the previous world record by approximately five minutes.

Under normal conditions, Vitomir Maričić can hold his breath underwater for 8 to 10 minutes, but in order to increase his breath-hold, he breathes pure oxygen for about 10 minutes before going underwater.

This allowed him to have five times the normal oxygen level in his blood, which helped him hold his breath for much longer. However, breathing pure oxygen is dangerous because it can cause oxygen toxicity, which can be fatal.

Raccoon steals package from porch

Plattsburgh: A New York resident's home security camera captured the moment a package was stolen from their porch by a masked porch pirate — a raccoon.

The Plattsburgh resident said the Chewy box, which contained $93 worth of pet food meant to be returned, had been left in a bin on the porch to be picked up by FedEx.

A local raccoon had other plans, however, and the security camera recorded video as the hungry animal shredded the box and feasted on its contents.

The resident said their camera also recorded the raccoon returning on subsequent nights to check the mail bin for more edible goods. They said Chewy understood the situation and still issued a full refund.

A Texas resident faced a similar situation in 2024 when a box of cookies delivered to their front door became a treat for a neighbourhood opossum.

Zebra crossing is a rare sight in Mysuru city

Sir,

We have been reading various reports almost every day in Star of Mysore over the past few weeks about the worsening traffic conditions in Mysuru — fused signal lights, pothole-filled roads, unmanned traffic junctions, confusing or misleading signboards, and more.

One of the most important elements that can prevent accidents and protect pedestrians is the zebra crossing. Unfortunately, these have now become a rare sight on city roads, causing undue stress to everyone, especially elderly citizens and children, who face great difficulty while crossing busy roads.

With Dasara fast approaching, it is high time that the Mysuru Traffic Police and the City Corporation take immediate action to restore the missing zebra crossings on all busy roads in the city centre, as well as in residential extensions. Additionally, it is crucial to maintain these crossings with regular repainting at timely intervals to ensure they remain visible and effective.

It goes without saying that well-marked zebra crossings instil discipline among motorists, guide pedestrians safely across roads, and play a vital role in preventing accidents.

Pedestrians should feel safe and confident while crossing the road — not fearful or at risk.

Dasara lightings on trees

MGP to hold 'appiko chaluvali' near DC's residence tomorrow

Mysuru, Sept. 13 (BCT)- Mysore Grahakara Parishat (MGP) has announced plans to hold a silent 'appiko chaluvali' (protest by hugging trees) on Sept. 14 at 9.30 am in front of the Deputy Commissioner's (DC) residence on Hunsur Road, protesting the practice of wrapping decorative illumination wires around trees during the Dasara festivities.

Environmentalists and green activists have strongly opposed this method, pointing out that it has been scientifically proven to harm trees.

They argue that when Mysuru is making dedicated efforts to improve its green cover by planting and preserving trees, it is deeply ironic that certain Dasara authorities are engaging in practices that endanger them.

What makes the situation more concerning, MGP said, is that Deputy Conservator of Forests (DCF) Paramesh has already raised the issue with both the Mysuru City Corporation (MCC) Commissioner and the DC, urging them to prevent the use of trees for illumination.

The DC has reportedly assured that action will be taken to stop such harmful activities.

However, despite these assurances, trees right outside the DC's own residence are being prepared for illumination by wrapping wires around them, which MGP calls a blatant disregard for environmental guidelines.

The silent protest aims to support the Forest Department's stance and demand immediate intervention to ensure that eco-friendly and sustainable practices are followed during Dasara celebrations.

Boulder blasting activity atop Chamundi Hill sparks concerns

Mysuru, Sept. 13 (MTY&BCT)- A controversy has erupted over the unauthorised drilling and destruction of massive rock formations on private land atop Chamundi Hill, sparking outrage among environmentalists, local villagers and trekkers.

The activity was detected near the steps route to the Hill, behind a Government School in Survey No. 24/2, where the landowner allegedly began removing five to six large boulders with the help of labourers and heavy-duty drilling machinery.

Holes were bored into the rocks, and the boulders were pulverised without mandatory clearance from the Forest Department. Over the past few days, vigilant citizens noticed the large-scale drilling and suspected it to be illegal mining on the Hill, which is classified as a protected ecological zone.

Village Accountant S. Mahesh inspecting the drilling and destruction of massive rock formations on private land atop Chamundi Hill.

Videos of the drilling equipment in operation quickly spread across social media, triggering public anger and calls for an immediate investigation.

Responding to the uproar, Village Accountant S. Mahesh, under the direction of Tahsildar Mahesh Kumar, carried out an on-site inspection on Friday morning. The survey revealed that the land in question is registered as 'Hiduvali' — a hereditary private tenure, and not Government property.

Revenue officials clarified that while the landowner holds legal ownership, he bypassed the required permissions from the Forest Department to carry out rock removal.

As a result, the Revenue Department cannot take direct punitive action, though the violation of forest clearance rules will now be examined by the authorities.

This finding has dispelled rumours of illegal mining on Government land, but the incident has reignited serious concerns over the lack of oversight and the potential environmental damage to the ecologically fragile Chamundi Hill.

Officials stressed that the site is private property and not an encroachment, though they acknowledged the need for stricter regulation to prevent such activities in future.

Sub-caste Nation

> It is time for our intellectual class to drop the selective outrage and confront caste honestly ...
> Until then, we'll just be a sub-caste filled nation that will forever remain a sub-standard nation.

Come election season in India, especially State Assembly elections, one ugly truth inevitably rises to the surface: Caste politics.

With the Bihar polls looming, the conversation has turned unexpectedly revealing. A long-held myth is being shattered, the myth that caste is a 'Hindu problem'.

For decades, Left-leaning intellectuals, secularists and vote-bank politicians have projected caste as an exclusive Hindu disease.

This was not accidental. By singling out Hinduism as the exclusive carrier of the caste virus, they could simultaneously keep Hindu votes divided while consolidating minority communities into obedient vote banks. Meanwhile, Dalits within Islam and Christianity were, in effect, written out of the story.

Now, the reality that Islam and Christianity, while often presented as egalitarian, 'caste-free' religions, are equally riddled with caste hierarchies is coming forth. The Bihar election is exposing this most dramatically within the Muslim community.

Among Muslims, caste stratification is hardly new. The Ashrafs, such as Syeds, Sheikhs, Pathans, etc., have long claimed superiority, their prestige rooted in 'foreign' lineage.

Everyone else is considered Muslims of 'Indian origin,' such as the Ajlafs, Arzals and Atrafs and relegated to the lower rungs, lumped together as Pasmandas.

The Pasmandas constitute the majority of India's Muslims, yet they have remained almost invisible in positions of power. A 2005 study showed that out of 400 Muslim MPs elected till then, 360 were Ashraf.

Which means a population that is just around 15 percent of the Muslim community in India got 85 percent of the community representation.

Even in Aligarh Muslim University (AMU) in 2019 shows that upper-caste Muslims comprise 88.35 percent of the faculty, whereas the lower caste is only 4.81 percent.

This imbalance sparked political awakening in Uttar Pradesh, where lower-caste Muslims launched their own political outfits as early as 1994, forming the All-India Backward Muslim Morcha (AIBMM), which united 40 Pasmanda organisations.

In 2019, Pasmanda Muslims even discussed forming an independent national party. And in Bihar today, many Pasmandas are openly gravitating toward the BJP and JD(U), realising that decades of loyalty to upper-caste Muslim leadership in secular parties yielded them little but crumbs.

If Islam's caste fault lines are coming into political focus now, Christianity's have long been visible but conveniently ignored. Despite its rhetoric of equality, caste segregation thrives within Indian churches.

Take Trichy, Tamil Nadu. In one Catholic cemetery, a wall literally divides the burial grounds: Dalit converts to Christianity are buried on one side, upper-caste converts on the other.

Matrimonial ads in Christian magazines, until recently, specified caste preferences. In Kerala, Knanaya Christians, like Ashrafs among Muslims, proudly claim foreign descent — from Middle Eastern Jewish converts — asserting caste superiority over other Christians.

The violence is real, too. In 2018, Kevin Joseph, a Dalit Christian, married Neenu Chacko, a woman from a higher-caste Christian family. Her relatives responded by murdering Kevin in an honour killing!

No wonder, like how Pasmanda Muslims started a political outfit, Dalit Christians too started a movement called 'Dalit Christian Liberation Movement'.

This group even sought an audience with Pope John Paul II when he visited India to inform him about the oppression they were facing in the Church!

Clearly, equality before God has not translated into equality before men. Caste, clearly, does not vanish with baptism. Why then do our 'secular' voices ignore these stories? Because…

The caste question is politically useful only when it fractures Hindu society. To acknowledge caste within Islam or Christianity would mean confronting the reality that oppression exists across religions, and they will have to confront their own vote banks.

Every major religion in India is casteist. Muslims, Christians, Hindus, Buddhists and Jains all have devised their own hierarchies.

Even within communities most oppressed by caste — the Dalits and Adivasis — there are hundreds of sub-castes.

Consider the absurdity: The Scheduled Castes have 101 sub-castes. The Scheduled Tribes have 50 sub-castes and the Other Backward Classes have 199 sub-castes!

Apart from this, Muslims have 124 sub-castes, Brahmins have 120 sub-castes and Jains: 32 sub-castes. What does this say about us Indians?

That we are a country addicted to stratification. We slice and dice ourselves into ever-smaller fragments, then complain about why we are not Indians first.

If we are serious about tackling caste, we must admit that it is not confined to temples but also sits in mosques, churches and monasteries.

Caste is India's civilisational curse, not Hinduism's alone. Pretending otherwise is not secularism; it is selective blindness.

Perhaps it is time for our intellectual class to drop the selective outrage and confront caste honestly — everywhere it lurks, not just where it is politically convenient.

Until then, we'll just be a nation condemned to live forever as a federation of castes, arguing over superiority while marching in the same place. A sub-caste filled nation shall forever remain a sub-standard nation. Period.

Palace preps for Navarathri

Massive annual restoration drive

The Palace is adorned with one lakh incandescent bulbs spread across its façade, gates, and surrounding walls.

Due to natural wear and tear caused by pigeon droppings, wind and rain, approximately 30,000 bulbs get damaged annually. Ahead of every Dasara, all faulty bulbs are carefully identified and replaced to ensure a perfect display. This year, about 16,500 to 17,500 bulbs have been earmarked for replacement.

A team of over 12 skilled workers is engaged in the task, working in shifts and using high-powered cranes to access elevated sections of the Palace.

"Replacing damaged bulbs is a routine annual process. This year's restoration work is progressing at a rapid pace, and we are confident of completing it within a week," said T.S. Subramanya, Deputy Director, Mysore Palace Board.

Every year, the Palace sources approximately 35,000 specially manufactured bulbs from a Delhi-based supplier.

While 16,000 to 17,000 bulbs are replaced in preparation for Dasara, the remaining stock is used throughout the year for routine maintenance.

Tradition over technology

Despite the global shift toward LED lighting, the Mysore Palace has deliberately chosen to retain its traditional 15-volt thread-type incandescent bulbs, prized for their distinct golden glow that lends the illumination its unique charm. These bulbs are custom-made exclusively for the Palace and remain central to preserving its historic aesthetic.

Technicians use a live-switching system to identify and replace faulty bulbs in real-time without interrupting the ongoing lighting display. The Palace is divided into nine separate switch circuits, each controlling a specific section. This method allows for seamless repairs even during peak viewing times.

Preparations inside Durbar Halls

While the exterior is being readied, extensive preparations are also underway inside the Palace's Private and Public Durbar Halls, where the Royal Family performs sacred rituals during Navarathri.

The ornate chandeliers, each fitted with 19 to 25 bulbs, are being completely dismantled, cleaned with shampoo, and carefully reassembled to ensure they sparkle brilliantly for the festivities.

Precision switching system

The Palace illumination is divided into three distinct zones: The main Palace building, Jayamarthanda Gate and the entrance near the Kote Anjaneyaswamy Temple.

Each zone has a dedicated master switch. When all three are activated in perfect synchrony, it creates the iconic visual spectacle of one lakh bulbs lighting up simultaneously, a breathtaking moment cherished by locals and tourists alike.

Silent cue behind the glow

Mysuru, Sept. 13 (MTY& BCT)- Four power substations distribute electricity to the Mysore Palace illumination system. A red beacon light atop the central dome plays a critical role in coordinating the sequence.

Historically, this red light was a signal indicating that the Maharajas were present inside the Palace. Today, it serves as a silent pre-illumination cue.

The red light remains switched on continuously but is turned off exactly five minutes before the Palace lights are powered on, alerting technical staff to prepare for activation.

Within a span of 1-2 seconds, all three master switches are flipped, creating the illusion that the entire Palace bursts into light at once — a moment that never fails to awe the thousands gathered to witness the spectacle.

Dasara Air Show on Sept. 27 at 4.30 pm

Surya Kiran displays to thrill audiences

According to IAF sources, the Surya Kiran Aerobatic Team (SKAT) will be this year's star attraction. Known as the public face of the IAF, the Surya Kiran team has been a regular highlight of the Mysuru Dasara air shows for many years.

Flying the Hawk Mk-132 jets, their routines are visually spectacular while remaining safe to conduct over city limits — making them ideal for a public festival.

High-speed fighter demonstrations involving jets like Sukhoi-30, Mirage-2000 or Rafale are generally avoided within Mysuru city limits, owing to safety, noise and restricted airspace. Instead, the Surya Kiran Hawks, flying at relatively moderate speeds, can execute precision aerobatics safely within a smaller aerial zone, sources said.

Past participation and challenges

The Sarang Helicopter Display Team, flying Dhruv ALH helicopters, has also been part of earlier Dasara air shows. However, they did not participate in 2023, likely due to operational commitments, aircraft availability or scheduling conflicts, as the team was deployed for other demonstrations and exercises during the same period.

IAF sources added that organising multiple display teams involves complex logistics, higher costs and extensive coordination, which sometimes makes it challenging to feature more than one team.

The Dasara Air Show, previously held in 2017, 2018, 2019, and 2023, has consistently drawn overwhelming crowds, cementing its reputation as one of the marquee highlights of the Mysuru Dasara celebrations.

Forest Department introduces mud bath therapy for Dasara elephants

Mysuru, Sept. 13 (MTY& BCT)- With just ten days left for the grand inauguration of the Mysuru Dasara festivities, the Forest Department has taken an innovative step to safeguard the health and well-being of the elephants participating in the celebrations.

For the first time, a dedicated mud bath facility has been established within the Mysore Palace premises to support the Dasara elephant team in staying cool, relaxed and healthy.

The initiative comes in the wake of recent health concerns, as two to three elephants have shown signs of fatigue during training.

They were given rest, and as a preventive measure, the Department intensified its care regimen, introducing mud therapy — a natural and traditional remedy known to improve skin health, aid digestion and regulate body temperature.

Elephants naturally coat themselves in mud to cool down and protect their skin from parasites and the harsh sun — a common instinctive behaviour among wild and camp elephants.

Recognising this, the Forest Department transported truckloads of soil to the Palace premises, creating a large mud mound near the elephant bathing pond.

After their daily training sessions, often conducted on hard surfaces like concrete and asphalted roads, the elephants are now being allowed to roll in the mud, one by one.

Experts say this simple yet effective method not only relieves digestive issues but also prevents skin ailments and overheating, providing both physical and psychological comfort to the animals.

As the Dasara elephant team continues its rigorous rehearsals for the grand Vijayadashami Jumboo Savari procession, this thoughtful initiative has been met with visible enthusiasm — with the gentle giants quite literally rolling in joy.

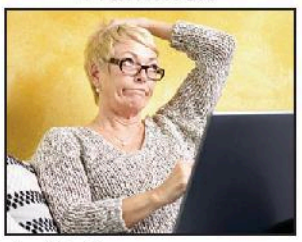
WORD OF THE DAY

Flummox



Pronunciation: FLUM-uks (Verb)
Meaning: To flummox someone is to confuse or perplex them.
Origin: "If Thursday crosswords flummox you, remember that it's much better for your stress level to do your best and sharpen your skills than to become angry because you aren't sure what's going on." —Deb Amlen, The New York Times, 11 June 2025.
Example: When it comes to the origins of flummox, etymologists are, well, flummoxed. No one really knows where the word comes from. The first known print use of the verb flummox appeared in Charles Dickens' novel The Pickwick Papers in the mid-1830s, while the adjective flummoxed appeared italicized a few years earlier in a Dublin newspaper article about laborers striking against employers who oppose their rights: "Lord Cloncurry is actually flummoxed. The people refuse to work for him." To be flummoxed by something is to be utterly confused by it—that is, to be baffled, puzzled, bewildered, completely unable to understand. Fortunately, a word can be used even if everyone is flummoxed by its etymology, and by the end of the 19th century, flummox had become quite common in both British and American English.

THE ODD WORD

Quotidian

Something that happens daily

PHRASE OF THE DAY

Flash in the Pan

Meaning: You use the expression 'Flash in the Pan' to indicate that something has failed, particularly if it had an impressive beginning.
Origin: The term 'flash in the pan' originated sometime during late 17th century, when flintlock muskets were used. An attempt to fire a musket that resulted in gunpowder flaring up but no ball firing was referred to as a flash in pan.
Example: "He only wrote one hit single; his music career was pretty much a flash in the pan."
